Philosopher's Holiday Lecture Series
Jamie Greenberg Memorial Lecture

A DEFENSE OF MODAL DUALISM

By
BRETT SHERMAN
Assistant Professor, University of Rochester

Wednesday, February 10, 2016
5:00pm, in Taylor Hall 203

Philosophers concerned with the nature of modal facts have subsumed them under a single kind of possibility. I propose a conception of modality centering on a connection between possibilities and open questions, according to which there are two fundamentally different kinds of possibility.